among the necessaries of life.

The proposition that the revenue derived from these sources is not needed is undeniable. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1879 the revenue from all sources was $273, 827, 183, and the expenditures were $286,949,883. There was, therefore, a surplus of only $6,879,300 to apply to the reduction of the public debt. But during the last fiscal year the revenues rose to $33,520,611, and the expenditures were $251,847,677. There was, therefore, a surplus of $0.678,974. If the receipts for the current year should be no greater than they were last year, still the surplus would be greater for the reason that the interest charge will be less. Last year the interest charge will be less, and the surplus should, therefore, be between the surplus should, therefore, be between than they were last year, still the surplus would be greater for the reason that the interest charge will be less. Last year the interest charge was $95,757,575. This year it will not exceed $78,000,000, assuming that none of the maturing binds will be refunded before the end of the year. The surplus should, therefore, be between seventeen and eighteen millions greater than it was last year, on this account alone. But there is reason to believe that the revenues will be greater, and that there will be a surplus of fully one hundred millions. This is a larger surplus than is needed. It is well to reduce the debt, but there is no necessity for reducing it at this rate. Assuming that $230,000,000 of 5 per cents will be refunded into 3 per cents or redeemed before the end of the next fiscal year, the interest charge will be sail further reduced in the assount of about $12,000,000. But more than half of this will be consumed the first year in payment of double interest, so that the net increase of surplus of the fart year in payment of double interest, so that the net increase of surplus of more than a hundred millions next year, so that it will be account will be reduced in the assount of this will be consumed the first year in payment of double interest, so that the net increase of surplus of more than a hundred millions next year, so that it will be account will be subject on a bolish. Still, with these taxes dropped, it is probable that there will be a surplus of more than a hundred millions next year, so that it will be account will be reduced in the superior of the surpless of the surpless of the surpless of the surpless of the first year in payment of doubte interest, so that the increase of surplus of more than a hundred millions next year, so that it will be account will be seen than the proceeds of the surpless of the culation and deposits, as Comptroller Knox will undoubtedly recommend. All this, however, is based on the sup-Knox will undoubtedly recommend.

All this, however, is based on the supposition that the expenditures will be kept within bounds, but there are hidications that the expenditures will be greatly greatly than it had ever been before. Mrs. Garithment of the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly that night, and it was difficult for her than the expenditures will be greatly greatly than the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly than the supposition that the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly than the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly than the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly than the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly than the supposition that the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly than the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly than the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly than the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly than the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly than the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly than the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly the supposition that the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly the supposition that the supposition that the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly the supposition that the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly the supposition that the supposition that the expenditures will be greatly the supposition that kept within bounds, but there are indications that the expenditures will be greatly increased. It was recently stated by one who professed to know whereof he was speaking, that President Hayes would not recommend any reduction in taxation in his forthcoming message, but would urgently recommend ilberai expenditures upon internal improvements, especially upon the improvement of the Mississippi river. It is well known that very many Congressmen are willing, not to say eager, to secure appropriations for improvements in their respective localities, and there is much reason to lear that if the President offers to share the responsibility with them they will not hesitate to vote the money. It looks now as though they would be sustained by influential commercial bodies throughout the Mississippi Valley, and in other localities where improvements are wanted at the expense of the national bankers, who are not pleased to see the national debt—the basis of an important branch of their business—in process of rapid extinction. They will certainly be sustained by the Greenbackers, including a great many people who did not support Mr. Weaver during the accounted for the presidency, because they are in favor of anything that promises inflation. It is not improbable, therefore, that we shall witness a high carnival of leg-rolling in Mashington during the comirg session of Congress. It is not important tranch of companies in fattor. It is not improbable, therefore, that we shall witness a high carnival of leg-rolling in Mashington during the comirg session of Congress. It is not improved the proposition of the presidency, because they are in favor of anything that promises inflation. It is not improbable, therefore, for course, although are during the context for the presidency as a first of the presidency and the white sand the white style of Noah. That we shall where so have a definition of the presidency are intended in the style of Noah. That was difficult to me in the style of Noah. That was difficult to me in the style of ling we shall witters a high carbival of log-rolling in Washington during the coming session of Congress. It is not im-probable that money will be appropriated so lavishly that it will not be safe to re-duce the taxes at all.

THE PASSION PLAY.

What Three Actors think of its Produc-

In view of the discussion relating to the "Passion Play," a Tribune reporter called yesterday upon James O'Neill and Lewis Morrison, who took part in the performance at San Francisco. Both expressed themselves as filled with a spirit of reverence and even awe while engaged in the performance. While the reporter was conversing with Mr. Morrison, Salmi P. Morse author of the play, entered and expressed his opinions in regard to his own work.

James O'Neill, who took the part of the Christus in the San Francisco production, was found at the Union Square Hotel. When asked by the reporter to speak of When asked by the reporter to speak of the "Passion Play," he shook his head and the "Passion Play," he shook his head and said:

"I cannot; I don't know what to say."
"You know that it is strongly opposed by the clergy here?"
"They do not know what they are talking about. It is the grandest speciacle I ever saw. It can not produce in the speciator any other feelings than those of the deepest reverence, and even awe. We never played to large houses in San Francisco; but I noticed the same faces in the audience every night; I myself used to get a second to the state of the part I was playing. I was unwilling to undertake it at first, but now I never want to play anything else. If the public will support me, Iauail devote the remainder of my life to this great work. I have no desire to go back to the routine work of the stage at all. I believe I can do more good by this representation than any of the stage at all. I believe i can do more good by this representation than any of the ministers from their pulpits."

Lewis Morrison, who has lately come from California expressly to act Pontias Pilate in the Passion Play, was sitting in the entrance of the hotel amoking a cigar. When questioned by the reporter, he said:

g said:

"What do I think of the Passion Play?
Does not my coming from San Francisco to play a part that does not begin until the piece is nearly ended speak for itself? I a m profoundly impressed with the spirit of that play. You can hardly comprehend the feelings with which the actors approached their work. The light, carcless demeanor that generally marks their acfition during the entracts completely disappeared. Every one felt as if he were in a temple where a solemn service was it taking place. I will tell you an incident that shows how we felt. O'Neill and I have acted together for years, and I know all his habits. He always carries in his dressing case a short meerschaum pipe.

At the Baptist preachers' confe revenue derived from all these taxes to gether is about $6,000,000 a year. The alluded to the prevailing sentiment of Commissioner thinks that this revenue is ministers of all denominations, as report not needed; and that the taxes ought to be repealed. He especially favors the re-peal of the taxes on matches, on the ground the conference took action in the matter. the conference took action in the matter. He offered the following resolution, which

He offered the following resolution, which was passed unanimonaly:

Resolved, That in view of the projected production of the "Passion Play" by one of the theatres of this city, as a conference we protest against such a sacreligious use of the most secred things in our religion.

But little has been said in any of the Republican papers about Mrs. Garfield, who is the prospective "first lady of the land." The Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald throws some light on the subject in the following remarks about
